Welcome to DialogLink - Version 5 Revolutionize the Way You Work!

New on Dialog Enhanced Derwent World Patents Index Now Available

The enhanced Derwent World Patents Index® (DWPI<sup>SM</sup>) (Files 350,351,352) is now available on Dialog. The improvements implemented in DWPI on Dialog further extend the database's rich content set and enhances overall functionality of the database.

In addition to distilled expert analysis reflected in DWPI expanded titles and abstracts, other enhancements include original patent filing details, multiple patent images, easy cut-and-paste patent family data, and much more.

The new templates include new features that will help you manage and distribute your DWPI search results in an attractive format.

Learn about all of the new DWPI enhancements and report templates at <http://www.dialog.com/dwpi>.

DialogLink 5 Release Notes

New features available in the latest release of DialogLink 5 (November 2005)

- Ability to resize images for easier incorporation into DialogLink Reports
- New settings allow users to be prompted to save Dialog search sessions in the format of their choice (Microsoft Word, RTF, PDF, HTML, or TEXT)
- Ability to set up Dialog Alerts by Chemical Structures and the addition of Index Chemicus as a structure searchable database
- Support for connections to STN Germany and STN Japan services

Red Message looks to exploit SMS

( Red Message launched service allowing Internet businesses to interact with customers through the use of their cell phones )

New Media Age , p 14

December 02, 1999

Word Count: 332

TEXT:

by Matt Reed

A new communications company has launched a service that allows Internet businesses to interact with customers via their GSM phones.

Red Message partners with Web sites to deliver targeted messages to customers who have submitted an online request for particular information.

The mobile services are based on text messaging as Red Message does not expect WAP technology to reach the mass market until GPRS (General Packet Radio Service) technology is launched in late 2000 or 2001.

"We're using SMS (Short Message Service) as an entry strategy. Our view is that (WAP) is not going to take off as quickly as was thought. We want to build our brand and go with other technologies as they evolve," said Steven Yurisich, marketing director.

The functionality of the current generation of WAP technology is limited, said Yurisich. "We can emulate a lot of WAP interactivity. WAP version one is basically SMS with some further interactivity - it's not surfing on the phone, it's still quite cumbersome. When GPRS and then smart phones come in, that will change - though they will be expensive at first," he said.

The company will develop WAP expertise in anticipation that the technology will take off. "We are building a WAP prototype at the moment," said Yurisich.

Red Message believes that its independence and exclusive focus on Internet clients will give it an edge over rivals from the telecoms sector. "One thing that differentiates us is that we're operator independent - we can reach the whole GSM network in Europe today," said Yurisich. "Our proposition is that we'll help you access the 100m (mobile phone) users in Europe."

In early 2000, Red Message is to launch a service that will allow phone users to make transactions in real time. The company's existing partners include Reed Employment and Sportal, and it plans to develop partnerships with Web sites in real estate, recruitment, financial services and travel.

As well as the UK, the service goes live in Sweden this week, and will launch in Germany in January 2000.
